Mise-en-Scène: Design

Discussion

Columbus (Kogonada, 2017)

Initial post is DUE by [Sunday 6/22 at 11:59pm]. Reply post(s) due by [Sunday 6/22 at 11:59pm].

Purpose

Our discussion for this Module focuses on how the design of films (i.e. decor, setting, costume, makeup, props, lighting) affects how they communicate to us.

We will focus on Kogonada's Columbus, a film about architectural design and people in the city of Columbus, Indiana. Design and composition are two elements of mise-en-scène that compliment each other. For this Module, we are primarily focusing on design, but your observations will often consider composition as well.

Instructions

For your Initial Discussion Post due by Sunday 6/22 at 11:59pm, please respond to the following prompt below in a post of at least 300 words. You do not have to address every detail of the prompt, but your post should contribute to the discussion and not merely repeat what has already been posted by your classmates. While I encourage you to offer your personal views of the films in this Module, please refrain from unproductive summaries of story or plot and/or why a film is "good" or "bad." Assume that everyone in the discussion group has completed the viewing assignment and understands the story/plot of the film. I suggest that you draft your post in Word first and assume that something may go wrong in Canvas when you hit 'Post Reply.' I will not count summary of plot/story or information that is not relevant to the prompt/analysis of one scene toward the required 300-word count. Please identify the time 0(hr):00(min):00(sec) in the film where the scene you are analyzing begins and concludes from the stream of the film included in the Module. Please do not repost the questions from this prompt into your post.

Your analysis should refer to course materials and reflect on how film style and history function. A post that earns full points will not merely agree with course materials, but will visually illustrate ideas through personal observation. Do not forget to include embedded media that visualizes the example(s) in your post. Please make sure that you read all of the posts in your discussion group before posting. I cannot give full points to posts that analyze scenes or shots that have already been selected by another classmate. Please limit your posts to no more than 400 words and 1-2 examples to give others a chance to write about key scenes/shots. Please resize your screenshots and images to 'Extra Large' in the 'Image Options.' The 'Image Options' tag appears above or below an image when you click on it while editing in the Rich Content Editor.

Grading Rubric Checklist for Full Points (Initial Post):

- Post identifies the time where the scene you are analyzing begins and concludes from the stream of the film included in the Module.
- Post analyzes no less than one minute and no more than three minutes of one scene. If you wish to discuss another scene, please do so in your response to another classmate.
- Post addresses materials related to the prompt and course materials.
- Post includes at least two embedded screen captures from the scene you are analyzing. Please resize your screenshots and images to 'Extra Large' in the 'Image Options.' The 'Image Options' tag appears above or below an image when you click on it while editing in the Rich Content Editor.
- Post does not analyze a scene previously selected by a classmate earlier in the thread. Sometimes a classmate will post about the scene you are analyzing while you are writing. It happens. Just message me and let me know.
- Post includes an embedded YouTube clip from a film from the last five years that showcases design that has not already been shared in your discussion group.

For your Response Post to one classmate due by Sunday 6/22 at 11:59pm, please reply in 75 words or more to at least one classmate's post. Responses may include describing your own insight related to the post, providing additional information from assigned or outside content, disagreeing respectfully by describing your own interpretation, proposing a new idea, or asking a question. I cannot give full points to posts that merely "like" or agree with another post; the response post must demonstrate substantial effort. Please try to respond to a classmate who has not yet received a response.

- Please choose one scene from Columbus and embed at least two (2) screenshots from the scene into your post. Describe how one design element in the scene (e.g. decor, setting, costume, makeup, props, or lighting) communicates something about the characters in the film that is not explicitly communicated by story, plot, and/or dialogue . Please compare the design of Columbus to either Star Wars: The Force Awakens or Moonlight. How does Kogonada's style show us the world in a different way than those other films? Please let us know your impression of Columbus and its unique way of presenting narrative.
- In addition to your analysis of a scene from Columbus, please suggest a film made in the last five years and how its design (e.g. decor, setting, costume, makeup, props, or lighting) made an impression on you. Please embed a YouTube clip of this film in the post to illustrate your point(s). Please choose a film that has not been selected by anyone in your discussion group.
