Case Explanatory Statement

Hello! My name is Xirong (Ziky) Zhang. The letter will explain all the information you need to know about me and why I am applying for financial and potentially any other kind of help you can offer me on this case.

Personal Background:

I came to the United States one and a half years ago as a foreign exchange student in high school[1.1]. The program provided a host family to take care of my daily needs as a student. I was lucky enough to be assigned to a kind family that truly treated me as one of their own. After a year of study in high school as a junior, I was tired of the high school drama and the inflexibility of the schedule, so I decided to drop out and advance my academic career a step earlier and further: applying for college.

Being a 16-year-old foreigner who can't pull a high school diploma out of the bag is tough. After struggling for half a year worrying about not just schooling, but also housing, eating, and legal status, I finally got a chance to study at the City College of San Francisco[1.2]. Around the same period, I also applied for refugee status, due to the messed up political environment in my home country and the artwork I had made, which had a high chance of making me a political criminal in China. After careful consideration with my family members, we decided to let me apply for refugee status in the US.

I had an agreement with my family a long time ago about financial support after college. After I step into the gate of college, my parents will only support a portion of my life that is just enough for me to not have to work and study as a full-time student, which includes: housing, tuition, basic food, and a limited worth of accessories and home appliances. So financially, all I have right now is just the rent for next month, the budget for food, transit, and phone plan, and a small portion of the money I saved last month from cutting down the budget for food.

Me and the Guarantor:

The guarantor on file, Theresa Cervello is the mom of my host family half a year ago. She was still my guardian at the time I visited the hospital, on Apr.8th, 2023. I have kept great relations and constant communication with the Cervello family even after I left the house.

When the invoice was sent to her house, she was stressed and scared of her information being sent to collection. The feeling should be understandable since anyone would probably feel the same if having a $2000+ invoice addressed to one's house with their name on it. I took action as soon as I could and after receiving the message. I know this is a responsibility that she shouldn't take for me. So here is one of my requests: take her information out of this case and make me who is responsible for this case. I understand that I am still a minor but after calculation[2.1], putting me up in the responsible position should be doable.

I really don't want this to start cracking the relationship between me and the Cervellos, so please do the most you can with the responsibility transferring matter.

Day in hospital:

I am not able to memorize the specific time span of the things happened that day since I have a lot gone through my mind and life during this year, I'll generalize things to make sure everything I say is true.

On April 8th, 2023, my rash/cold (unable to recall what it was) has been with me for almost a week. My "American mom" decided to take me to the nearest ER because the hospitals were closed on the weekends. We arrived at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital at around 15:00 - 17:00. Checked in with the register and found a seat to wait for the doctor to call my name. The ER waiting room was crowded. We waited around 2 - 4 hours to hear my name was called finally. We went into the ER and the doctor had me sit on one of the seats and gave me a brief check, had another doctor came and took a look at my problem and we were sent out of the room with a prescription and the pharmacy location in hand. The whole check was around 1 - 7 minutes, with no professional medical equipment used. At most, they use a pair of gloves, a few mAh of power in their flashlight battery and the chair I sat in the ER.

I do not think the whole procedure would cost $2,842 in this matter. Counting the overtime for workers who had professional interaction with just me and the hospital equipment resource that I have used. These can hardly add up to $100. Considering my financial situation, squeezing $100 out of my "allowance and budget for food" should not be too big of a problem. But it still has to be reasonable, like showing an itemized receipt with the exact medical equipment I have used there.

Family Financial Situation:

The attachment file "Bank Statement.pdf" is my father's bank statement used a few days ago for his visa application.
There are only very limited English translations in this file and the currency is all RMB. After contacting one of your call center representatives, she told me labeling the currency to equivalence USD is enough. So in another attachment "USD equivalence" has all the transactions in the pdf labeled with: date, received amount, paid amount, balance, and USD equivalence. Due to the currency exchange rate technically changing every second, the reference date that I made the spreadsheet is mentioned at the top of the file.

A few side notes for "USD equivalence",

1. When I was making the spreadsheet, I found some balances didn't quite equal what they were "supposed to be". But I figure, this is the statement they used for visa application, it only printed the transactions of money transfer, and daily expenses are not included.
2. There are a lot of transfers out towards my mom, due to my parents' role in not just their company, but also in the family. My dad is the businessman, but at the end of the day, all the money still needs to be under the control of my mom, the "financier".

Materials you might need:

I have tried my best to think of what you need to benefit this case as much as possible, but still, there could be some oversights. Files related to my asylum application are a bit too private, so I have decided not to show up here, but if you absolutely need it, I can still provide some.
Contact me for more information if there are any questions or more files are required.
I'm truly grateful that your facility is willing to take my case and make advance investigations, and also for all the phone calls answered and patiently answering my answers.

[1.1] My student visa for high school when I first got to the US

[1.2] My CCSF student ID card

To: Theresa Cervello

Great news, I have called the charity care. After a brief explanation of my current situation, they are happy to sent me an application for the medical bill assistant.

I have ask them about the collection. They said, the collection normally won't be processed before 120 days after the first bill sent out. while, my name has already been record in the charity care system, the account will be on hold for 2 weeks. When I am applying for the assistant, which normally takes 30 - 60 days to process and communicate between the service and the hospital, will also be on hold.
So these will give us around 164 - 194 days to react and deal with it.

Just lay back, you know I'm not bad kid, I'll take all responsibility and not let my american mom worry and stress about it.

I know that well because I'll be legally turning 18 in 156 days, and that is 8 days before the collection warning. Plenty of time to change the bill to under my name.
